

Guiding principles

"The spirit in which we act is the highest matter"
Goethe

We at Felchlin

We wish to earn money through service – openly, honestly, cheerfully and optimistically.

Our determination to offer dynamic service knows no boundaries. The client is king. We are constantly ready to engage ourselves for our customers. We work together with our clients to help them develop their successful organizations while aspiring to be leaders in innovation.

The secret to our success is discipline. We deliver premium products of consistent quality that are simple to process. We are punctual and reliable. Our self-discipline demands self-assessment and continual improvement through modern training.

Our philosophy extends to all areas and people: suppliers, banks, tradesmen, the disadvantaged – simply, the entire surrounding in which we live and with whom we have contact. In particular, we strive to provide our employees with a pleasant and positive working environment.

We wish to remain independent through financial sovereignty.

We are honest and do not lie to anyone, neither ourselves nor others. Our spoken and written words are equally binding. We do not accept or offer bribes. We endorse Switzerland, respect its institutions, obey its laws and pay taxes fairly.

We are cheerful. A cheerful disposition is a result of self confidence and satisfaction. A bit of fun, a joke, a laugh both lighten and brighten the day while sustaining and supporting the peak performance required.

Difficulties are met and mastered with optimism.

Our aim is to earn our money. Without earnings, we harm our home country. Regular profits allow us to pay our wages, bills and taxes while financing our future growth and investments, thus enabling us to achieve our goal – a role model for the industry.

This is what we attempt to achieve.

Max Felchlin 1923-1992